

MILITARY CHIEFS SEE PRESENTATION OF DAMAGED GOODS

High officials of the War and Navy Departments, as well as officers and men of these branches of the service, today are praising "Damaged Goods," which was presented at the New National Theater yesterday for the education of the soldiers and sailors of Washington and its vicinity. The picturization of the famous drama was viewed by more than 1,500 uniformed men. Surgeon General C. G. Gorgas and Secretary of the Navy Daniels made brief addresses.

"The soldier who does not live cleanly does as much harm to the cause as the worst enemy spy," said General Gorgas.

"If our young men are clean of mind and keep their bodies clean, the cause we espouse will win early," said Secretary Daniels.

"The play is for the purpose of protecting the innocent," said Richard Bonnett, who took the leading role. "By living clean, we make character, and character is what we need more than anything else."

Military men of every rank and of many nationalities saw the play.

Films of a similar nature are to be shown to soldiers throughout the country. It was announced by Major Pullman.

The use of the theater was given by Manager Harry W. Rapley.

YEAR 5678 FINDS JEWS HAPPY OVER RUSSIAN FREEDOM

Washington Hebrews today are celebrating Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, which began at sunset last night with a joyous sense that has not been theirs heretofore.

"New Year 5678 has a world significance. The horrors of a world-war have emancipated 6,000,000 Jews in Russia," declared Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Eighth Street Temple, today. "This is the first time in 2,800 years when it may be said with apparent truthfulness that the Jews of the world are free. America's entrance into the war will likely add another 35,000 to the 400,000 Jews already participating in the conflict. Our prayers for Israel's happiness blend with our hope for America's ultimate triumph."

The reformed Jews celebrate today only, but the orthodox services will continue through tomorrow.

A Slight Influence From Colonial Days Draws the New Silhouette for the New Fall Dresses

—You might think it a little difficult to discover, but look twice at the surprise front of many of them, the rather close fit at the normal waist line, and the aeroplane skirt that faintly suggest the puffed hip of Colonial costumes, and you will note the similarity.

—Serges and Satins are in the majority, but Crepe de Chine will hold its own in popularity. Serges in plain waist models, with roll Tuxedo collars, with over collar of white satin and aeroplane skirt. —"The Nancy," which is a pretty Dress-waist model, in of serge, has surprise front, pointed white-satin collar, aeroplane skirt. The surprise front ends in a wide belt that meets in the back, and is finished with two rows of buttons. Buttons trim the "wings" of the skirt and deep cuffs. There are many other pretty styles of serge, some having the slip through patent leather belt.

—In Satins there is a smart style with accordion pleated panel front and back, the sides of skirt in full tunic effect, short, with skirt underneath; tunic part is edged with Kerami; has satin collar with over collar of fillet lace, and a sash girdle. In Crepe de Chine there is a charming style, box pleated front and back, neatly stitched collar and cuffs, flaps at belt, also neatly stitched.

Still another style has a two-in-one-collar and straight turnback cuffs, both collar and cuffs finished with crochet $2.95

Soft Crown Velvet Hats For General Wear

—Though all are black they are designed for wear with the new coat suits of both black and color. Some have gathered brim, and others have smooth brim; mushroom shapes, roll brim turbans, and straight sailor shapes.
